A Barossa wine company was in the spotlight on June 1 with a focus on its sustainable solutions.

Tarac Technologies, at Nuriootpa, was toured by Minister for Environment Paul Caica.

Tarac's chief executive officer Chris Zajac and Beckwith Park chief executive Jeremy Blanks hosted the Minister's visit, with the invitation extended by Member for Schubert Ivan Venning.

According to Mr Venning, "The Minister was obviously impressed by the presentation and what this business is doing to ensure sustainability for the wine industry by offering innovative, environmentally sustainable solutions for disposing of wine making wastes and bi products"

Chris Zajac said, "Since Tarac's beginnings in 1930, innovation has been a key driver in developing new processes, products and markets due to the ever changing commercial, environmental and legislative landscape".

"We see these changes as opportunities rather than impediments, establishing an appropriate balance between commercial and environmental sustainability is critical and our value proposition is in the delivery of these solutions to the wine industry," Mr Zajac said.

In addition to Tarac Technologies, Beckwith Park, at Tanunda Road Nuriootpa, was also inspected by the Minister.
